Detailed Description/Instructions: After a class discussion about how to graph the different economic events, the instructor can call individual students to the board and announce a market and an event. The students need to draw the current equilibrium price and quantity, and then show the effects of the event. The instructor gives participation points on the first day with a follow quiz the next day. S&D - Graphing Real World Events
Example 1: In the market for cars, suppose the current price of a car is the equilibrium price of the market. What will happen to the supply and demand curves if the price of a car increases? As seen in the graph above, the increase in price leads to a decrease in the quantity demanded and an increase in the quantity supplied. Recall that when prices increase, people buy fewer amounts of that good and suppliers produce more of that good.

Example 2: Suppose the market for shoes is currently in equilibrium. If the price of sandals increases, what happens to the market for shoes? When the price of sandals increases, more people will substitute shoes due to their relatively cheaper price. Thus, the demand for shoes will increase, shifting the demand curve to the right.

Example 3: The market for a type of candy is currently in equilibrium. If new studies show the candy helps prevent several types of cancer, what will happen to the market for this candy? Because the candy provides health benefits, more people will eat more of the candy. This example falls under the “taste” determinant of demand. The more favorable “taste” of this candy causes demand to increase and the curve to shift right.

Example 4: Suppose the market for golf balls is currently in equilibrium. If the price of a golf club increases, what will happen to the price of a golf ball? With an increase in golf clubs, golfing becomes a more expensive sport. This example fits under the “price of complements” determinant of demand. With higher golf club prices, people will buy fewer golf balls. This will lead to a decrease in the demand for golf balls, shifting the curve to the left. Because of the new demand curve, a new equilibrium point will be established at a lower price. Thus, the price of a golf ball will decrease.

Example 5: Suppose the market for tanks is currently in equilibrium. If the price of metal used in making the tanks decreases, what happens to the market for tanks? With cheaper metal for production, the cost of producing a tank decreases. With lower costs, supply will increase in order to maximize profit. Thus, the supply curve will shift to the right.

Event Planning Sales Pitch

You are to assume the role of a Marketing Consultant. Kansas City has approached you to develop and coordinate a national sporting or entertainment event that the city could host. You are hoping to convince venture capitalist and the city to invest their money into your event campaign (much like Shark Tank). You will need to put together a multimedia presentation to sell you event idea. You will meet with the investors and city officials, where they will expect you to discuss and justify your business proposal.

The teacher can set up a business panel to judge student presentations and invite an authentic audience to act as the investors. This activity can be set up as a fun competition where the top businesses are rewarded with bonus points (Or whatever is appropriate for the class setting).

  - L.1: Competency: Acquire knowledge of the impact of entrepreneurship to make informed economic decisions.

Detailed Description/Instructions: Every Friday, assign a couple students to present their findings after interviewing a successful business person in their field of interest. This will also help inform the other students of their career choices.

For Example: Interview your Future. Researchers have identified several characteristics of successful entrepreneurs: independent, self-confident, possess determination and perseverance, goal-oriented, need to achieve and set high standards, creative and act quickly. See how many of these characteristics you see in the person you interview.

Include the following information in your summary paper: Name of person, type of business, how long in business, size of business, sole proprietor, partnership or corporation? Why did they go into this business? How did they get the idea for the business? Is the business a family business, franchise or independent business? What characteristics does the entrepreneur think it takes to be a successful entrepreneur? What is the best part about owning your own business? What is the hardest part about owning your own business? What advice would you give to someone going into business for him or herself? Be creative and add a few questions of your own!

Unit of Study Terminology

Appendices: All Appendices and supporting material can be found in this course’s shell course in the District’s Learning Management System.

Assessment Leveling Guide: A tool to use when writing assessments in order to maintain the appropriate level of rigor that matches the standard.

Big Ideas/Enduring Understandings: Foundational understandings teachers want students to be able to discover and state in their own words by the end of the unit of study. These are answers to the essential questions.

Engaging Experience: Each topic is broken into a list of engaging experiences for students. These experiences are aligned to priority and supporting standards, thus stating what students should be able to do. An example of an engaging experience is provided in the description, but a teacher has the autonomy to substitute one of their own that aligns to the level of rigor stated in the standards.

Engaging Scenario: This is a culminating activity in which students are given a role, situation, challenge, audience, and a product or performance is specified. Each unit contains an example of an engaging scenario, but a teacher has the ability to substitute with the same intent in mind.

Essential Questions: Engaging, open-ended questions that teachers can use to engage students in the learning.

Priority Standards: What every student should know and be able to do. These were chosen because of their necessity for success in the next course, the state assessment, and life.

Supporting Standards: Additional standards that support the learning within the unit.

Topic: These are the main teaching points for the unit. Units can have anywhere from one topic to many, depending on the depth of the unit.

Unit of Study: Series of learning experiences/related assessments based on designated priority standards and related supporting standards.

Unit Vocabulary: Words students will encounter within the unit that are essential to understanding. Academic Cross-Curricular words (also called Tier 2 words) are those that can be found in multiple content areas, not just this one. Content/Domain Specific vocabulary words are those found specifically within the content.
